For our son, brother and uncle Jamie Every day that goes by and you are not here is heart breaking. It's nearly 7years since you were called to heaven and it's still so hard without you. We all miss you so much. Life without you is not the same.

You had such a spark, you always put a smile on everyone's face with your silly ways. We try so hard to carry on but it's hard.

We take it day by day. You now have 2 nieces who will always know about their Uncle Jamie and I know you are around them all the time.

You will be forever 17 and forever in our hearts.
Love and miss u always

Remembering
Cillian Minnock

Sweetie, yet another year has passed. This year I came to Ireland – I saw your home, met your brothers. Even though you were not there, your presence is still felt, is still so alive – in the photos of you everywhere, in your brothers – their smile, their laughter. I felt, at times, that you were still there.

I also visited your grave. I saw the toys and the flowers that make up your final resting place. It is obvious to everyone who passes that you are loved and remembered. We will always love you Cillian. We will always remember you. Such a special boy, you have touched us all. You will always be a vibrant part of our family, now and always.

With all our love,

Aunty Maz and

Remembering
Danny

Dear Danny, Mammy loves and misses you, 3 years on from when you took your angel wings a fell asleep forever in my arms. Just thinking about how excited you would have been about Santa coming you would be about 3 yrs old, just the age for all the mischief and magic!

I know you are watching over me and i think about you every day, my wonderful little soldier you tried so hard and fought to live, using every little bit of strength you had, I'd like to think heaven needed an angel, I remember the day you fell asleep, your little tiny hand lay on my breast and you curled the other around strands of hair my lasting memory of you as you drifted off was your big blue eyes slowly closed and in your last breath a smile on your lips...

Sleep well my angel with all my love xx Mammy
